Finest organic quality since 1979.

About us

We have been producing organically grown tea, coffee, and spices since 1979. We firmly believe that this challenging form of cultivation is the first step in making high-quality, natural food. But there is even more at stake. With every organic product sold, the number of organically cultivated fields grows as well. This means we are helping to advance a form of agriculture that both protects nature and results in food and beverages of exceptional quality.

We buy at the place of origin, because quality has roots and we want to accompany the creation of our products from the very start. We see supplier relationships as long-term quality-based partnerships. Together we shape the entire value chain from the field, via the processing in our production facility, all the way to the finished product ready to sell. Business management understood in this way creates lasting value and is beneficial for everyone involved. Putting all modesty aside, we like to call it the food economics of the future.

Our portfolio for your success

We have been guided by our purity principle since 1979. Whether coffee, tea or spices, our products never contain flavourings, flavour enhancers or additives. And we haven't wasted our time trying to come up with a justification for this – we simply love the delicious taste of nature. We invest a lot of care in the selection of the raw materials that go into our teas, coffees and spices, so we don't need to use additional flavourings. With one exception: our cold-pressed essential oils of bergamot, lemon and orange. They may count as "flavourings" under German flavouring regulations, but for us they are indispensable natural ingredients – and the only additives we allow ourselves. And only because, like a good olive oil, these pure oils are produced entirely mechanically and without any additives. After all, what would an Earl Grey tea be without the bergamot?
